No matter what kind of travel you're into, November has something to offer you somewhere in the world. Lovers of cool temperatures and snow sports can explore the Northern Hemisphere, while places like Australia and the Caribbean offer plenty of sun if you're not ready for winter's chill. Early holiday celebrations also start to pop up in November, which is perfect for those who want festive charm without December crowds. Whether you opt for the souks of Marrakesh or the cozy confines of the Ozarks, we hope you'll find time for a getaway this November.

St. Barts

By November, hurricane season has passed and peak visitor season is just beginning, making it a great time for a trip to Saint Barthélemy (aka St. Barts). The weather is warm and sunny, beaches are gorgeous, and festive events are on the schedule. The St. Barth Gourmet Festival, Nov. 5-10, brings top chefs for a celebration of local and French cuisine. The Caribbean Rum Awards and Cata Cup sailing regatta will also attract fans. If you happen to tire of relaxing on the beach or lounging beside your hotel pool, there's plenty to do, from shopping to hiking. Choosing a hotel for your Caribbean vacation might be the most difficult part of the trip, with many stunning properties on the island. Once that "chore" is done, you can look forward to sunny days, delicious food, and island atmosphere.

Where to Stay:

Le Barthélemy Hotel & Spa is notable for its wellness center, Le Spa.
